Index to Volume 20

Adaptation of bones to stress, 91

Adaptive value to early amniotes of internal fertilization, 245

Age distributions in stochastically dividing populations, 314

Analysis of the short-circuiting technique applied to in vivo tissues, 341

Bones, adaptation of to stress, 91

BRANNEN, J. P., Concerning reversible denaturation of RNA and memory, (letter), 358

BROCKWELL, P. J. (see TRUCCO, E.), 321

Comments on paper by Zotin and Zotina "Thermodynamic aspects of developmental biology", (letter), 126

—— the action of quaternary ammonium compounds at the receptor site, (letter), 124

Concerning reversible denaturation of RNA and memory, (letter), 358

Connection between the cell environment and the production of molecules whose synthesis requires energy. I. The formulation of a general law, 1

—— II. The discussion of the general law, 30

Control processes, cellular, mathematics of. I. Negative feedback to one gene, 202

—— ——— II. Positive feedback to one gene, 209

COULSON, A. S. and SMITH, N. V., The tuberculin receptor site on sensitized human lymphocytes, 112

Cultured normal cell, life span of: concepts derived from studies of human lymphoblasts, 217

CURREY, J. D., The adaptation of bones to stress, 91

Defense of vitalism, 338

Deterministic origins of mitotic variability, 249

Digital computer analysis and simulation of biochemical systems in terms of kinetic models, 297

DIX, D., A defense of vitalism, 338

ENGELBERG, J., On deterministic origins of mitotic variability, 249

Environment, cell, the connection between and the production of molecules whose synthesis requires energy. I. The formulation of a general law, 1

—— II. The discussion of the general law, 30

Evolution, molecular, the implications for of possible mechanisms of primary gene duplication, 227
